The Emigration of French Communists to the United States.

A French publisher, Mr. Calot, editor of a newspaper called L'Amouriste, printed in Paris, published in one of his last numbers, an appeal to all the French Communists, of whom he calls himself chief. The article is as follows:

WORKERS, let us depart for America—what advantages have you here? What is your fate in this country? Recall, children of the people, poverty sets you in when you are born, and leaves you only when you die. Faith and rage for many, deprivations of every kind, ignorance and superstition examples of vice for all—work imposed before your strength is developed. Such is your fate. From your influence, excessive labor is imposed on you—often attended with danger. You are obliged to expose your lives to a thousand risks for a miserable salary. Sickness—the curse of the disease—no rights, no future, but a perpetual dread of the future, with fear of slavery and poverty. * * * * * It is your destiny in your youth.

How many are deprived of the happiness of marriage, and of family comforts! And for those who are destined to marry how many troubles and afflictions have they not to encounter! And in your old age, how many among you, after a laborious life, and numerous services rendered to the country, have only their great body of moderate anti-slaves, to be permitted to rest in peace?

Upon the settlement of this question depends the preservation of the existing balance of power between the slaveholding and non-slaveholding states, and it is evident that this comprehension is not very wide.

The successful working of the new tariff is in favor of the party at present in power; while the incessant demonstration at Chicago in favor of internal improvements—of which, as a political engine, they entertain no hereditary jealousy—has excited a lively apprehension in their ranks. Beyond such general grounds of compunction, little has as yet transpired. The wing of federal party, as the most powerful, is the most apprehensive, and is generally agreed to be hostile to us, as a party, especially on General Taylor as their presidential candidate or to avoid the Chicago convention as a party movement. The democrats, on the other hand, are so cautious, that they will not cut off the chance of winning the "rough and ready" for their candidate, and are careful not to whisper a word about a resolution of Mr. Polk. Be the result of the contest what it may, we have every reason to hope for success.

Many questions have been propounded to public opinion, that may shake local institutions to their foundations. In the war with Mexico, victory may end as much danger as defeat. But we believe that the administrative talent which has hitherto secured the halo of State will not be found wanting in the hour of trial, and that the funds collected which with States, as with individuals, often exist so strangely in a latent state, and the most bitter family sorrows, will avert all serious and imminent danger to the two nations.
